GREAT MINDS SIP ALIKE

We don’t have just one great wine region in Washington—they span the state from the cool maritime climes of Puget Sound to the warm soils of Walla Walla. And that’s just wine. WA ranks #1 in the country for production of hops, and we’re also home to artisan cider, kombucha, ginger beer and shrub makers. Here’s just a few of our favorites to get you sipping local this season.

- Badger Mountain Vineyard
- Bainbridge Vineyards
- Barreca Vineyards
- Bellewood Farms & Distillery
- Desert Wind Winery
- Finnriver Farm & Cidery
- Lopez Island Vineyards & Winery
- Madrone Cellars
- Probably Shouldn’t Distillery

A farm share or CSA is an arrangement between a farmer and customer where you typically buy a subscription to a local farm in advance of the season. By offering “shares” of seasonal harvests, the farm benefits from your financial support while you reap the rewards of good food, grown with care purchased directly from farmers you know.

The time to sign up is generally between January and April, but each farm varies. As consumer needs have shifted, many CSAs and farm shares are adapting their business model—adding home delivery, new drop points, additional season shares and sign-up options. CSAs are surging in popularity, so we encourage you to begin your research for 2021 now!

All these featured farms are listed on our WA Food & Farm Finder along with other CSAs around the state, plus local food box delivery services. Find them at eatlocalfirst.org/wa-food-farm-finder.

WHITE LOTUS FARM & INN
Every day, personal choices concerning what we eat impact our environment. For those who choose meat as part of their diet, there’s an ever growing number of sustainable producers in Washington who, says farmer Micha Ide of Bright Ide Acres in Orting, are “dedicated to providing our animals with the best care possible and allow them to engage in their natural behaviors.”

Options for sourcing local meat from farmers and ranchers includes purchasing online, from farmstores, buying seasonal shares, whole animals or custom cuts. We encourage you to learn more about the farms listed here and other local meat producers by visiting our WA Food & Farm Finder eatlocalfirst.org/wa-food-farm-finder.
